is apparent from the accounts in It is apparent from the accounts in Sour papers that you do not know the furiana is really meeting with success in Paris. It made its real debut under the most favorable conditions at a feteravisante in the great dance hall of the Rejane Theatire. It was an affair to be remembered. Every detail was carefully considered—even the lights carefully considered—even the lights were diffused with due regard for the complexions of the beautiful women, so that their loveliness was seen to best advantage. Here, among an assemblage of fashionables, of the feted, of the elegants and of great actors and actresses, and to the entrancing music of a matchless orchestra that third fashionables, derecting the contractions of the contraction of the contractions of the contraction of the played fashionable dances without ceasing, the furlana was given a true tarisian captism. The Hauld, by the way (served as refreshment), was tea way (served as refreshment), was tea --but, oh, such tea! The dance was most enthusiastically received with applause and high praise. Now that Lent is over, it is coming into its own.

It is no longer considered vulgar to wear initation jewels, hence one sees Indra pearls and other initation gems mounted in gold or the still more expensive platinum, or cheaper platinum, on the still more expensive platinum, or cheaper platinum, one is confronted with what appears to be a marvelous display of almost priceless gems at almost every dance one attends. Even the expert eye is deceived often, the imitation requiring inspection with a magnifying glass to reveal its true character. After all, isn't this a slight indication that this age is not truly so extravagant? It rather creates the impression of extravagance in its beauty-loving characteristics—and beauty is ever aristicardic. It is no longer considered vulgar to Rugs and carpets of Chinese inspira-tion, if not of Chinese origin, are to the had in plenty. Some very artistic somes are in two-tone with dragon de-sign. Most of them combine rich tones of yellow, ormage and brown with va-trious shades of blue, or black and gold. Chinese maitings are likewise attrac-taive. The new cretonnes will furnish you any number of patterns in ma-terial for draperies, so there is no ne-cessity to indulge in the more ex-pensive. Parts, May 7.—To what extent will the present remarkable invury of stage setting go? The Varietic Theatre has ordered the reproduction of five rare tapestries of Beauvais, these veritable chefs decuvre to be copied from the outsided sketches of F. Boucher.

These are for the presentation of the "Mervelleuses" (you doubtless kinow all about the society of women that once bore this name in France), which is to take place at the home of liarias, at the palace of Luxembourg. The five masterpieces include "The Abandoning of Psyche," the original of which ornaments the chaicau de Cobients, and "Ariadne the chaicau de Cobients, and "Ariadne Sail should be added with the vores."
